

REEN WATERMAN

With over 15 years as an author, journalist, business coach, and national speaker, Reen is passionate about helping people tell their stories. An avid reader and researcher, he is fond of saying, "Tell your story. Change the world." That is true because people connect best with stories.

As a ghostwriter, business communications specialist, and business trainer, Reen writes his insightful monthly column Better Business Protocol for EDGE Magazine, Chattanooga's only business magazine. Certified by the Charleston School of Protocol, he delivers business training on communications, customer service, networking, professionalism, and public speaking. He also provides executive coaching.

Prior to starting Waterman Communications Group, Reen enjoyed over 35 years of real estate experience as co-owner of two companies and former real estate columnist for APG Media of Chesapeake. His first book, Helpful Homeowner Hacks, compiles his most popular columns. A proud disabled veteran, he served as an infantry officer with the U.S. Army's 25th Infantry Division.

An avid outdoorsman and member of the Outdoor Writer's Association of America, Reen holds a B.A. in history from Washington & Lee University and M.A. in Christian Counseling from Capital Bible Seminary. As a Men's Ministry speaker, he combines Biblical insights, practical strategies, outdoor experiences, and humor to inspire personal, marital, and spiritual growth.
